The Mainland and Hong Kong Closer Economic Partnership Arrangement (CEPA) is a free trade agreement concluded by the Mainland of China and Hong Kong in 2003. CEPA gives Hong Kong businesses, products and services the most preferential treatment to open up the huge Mainland market. Hong Kong products that fulfil the CEPA rules of origin can enjoy zero tariff benefit upon importation into the Mainland. Hong Kong service suppliers can enjoy preferential treatments in various service sectors for access to the Mainland market. The latest liberalisation measures for trade in services have been smoothly implemented since June 2020, introducing new liberalisation measures in a number of important services sectors, making it easier for Hong Kong enterprises and professionals to set up enterprises and develop business in the Mainland, capturing the tremendous opportunities brought by the National 14th Five-Year Plan. In this seminar, a representative from the Trade and Industry Department will talk about the preferential treatment and recent development concerning the opening of the Mainland's services market under CEPA. Sign up now to discover the exciting opportunities offered by CEPA!
